191 Fairhaven Road State Survey AA-45-R-b AA-355

The building at 191 Fairhaven Road is a good example of a vernacular type, the telescope house, that is characteristic of Maryland's Eastern Shore. The building, s composed of 3 sections a big house, middle house and kitchen, is a type whose configuration arose from the distribution of the service wing to the side of the main block although in some cases, a smaller section may have been constructed prior to the larger section and more prominent main block.

In the case of the building at 191 Fairhaven Road, the building represents a good example of the type, however, the building is severely dilapidated. The building has been altered with asbestos siding and many of the windows are missing. The rear porch as well as the gable roofs of all three sections of the building are collapsing. If the building were rehabilitated soon, much of the original material would require replacing. The form could be preserved but the integrity of the finishes, materials, details would be lost. The building does retain its rural setting, an important element in considering eligibility but the setting and the unique aspect of the architectural type can not overcome the serious condition of the building. The determination is that the building would not be eligible based upon the lack of architectural integrity resulting from the building's deteriorated condition.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Collison house is a three part "telescoping" frame structure. The main section is 2 1/2 stories. It has a side hall and entrance, is one room deep, and has a single exterior end chimney. The south, or rear, elevation has a two story open porch across the length of the building. The three bay front has 6-over-6 pane windows. The entrance in the west end bay, is framed in diamond-pane side and transom lights. The attic windows on the gable ends have 4-over-2 pane openings.

The two smaller parts of the house are 1 1/2 and 1 story each. The entire house is covered with asbestos shingle.

The house stands on a working farm of almost 100 acres. It appears on the 18060 and 1878 county maps as belonging to Cap't Gover and G. Gover respectively. The house was probably built in the second quarter of the 19th century.
